Cleveland Elementary School's redesigned model centers on school culture, student agency, and using data effectively. In order to personalize learning for all students, Cleveland is implementing teacher-designed pilots around student goal-setting and monitoring, personal learner profiles for every student, and flexible student groupings based on learner need.

All teachers perform self-assessments in these focus areas and track their professional growth across the year. Leadership regularly assesses the effectiveness of these strategies uses a short-cycle design approach to allow themselves to fail fast and learn quickly.
