Capital City Public Charter School utilizes a blended learning platform that personalizes education for students through project-based instruction and expeditionary learning (EL). This model allows teachers to identify resources and techniques that meet students' individual needs and provides students the opportunity to demonstrate content mastery, become more self-directed in their learning, and apply their skills in collaborative and real-life learning experiences and projects. Capital City has also developed a multifaceted professional development plan that helps instructors transition to this new model.
